Introduction
This session will provide a case study to critically review of a set of financial statements, with a particular focus on how to read financial statements and identify areas that should be examined in detail.

Using a practical example, participants will have the opportunity to think critically in an actual situation, examining media and company reports at the time and review subsequent events related to the organisation.

Topics
- Reading financial statements
- Key areas of focus
- Sceptical analysis
- Critical review
- Information sources

Learning Outcomes
On completion of this seminar attendees will understand how to read and examine financial statements.

Recommended For
Anyone who prepares or reads financial statements and wants practice critically reviewing vital information.

About the presenters

EVELYN HOGG Associate Director – BDO
Evelyn has over twenty five years experience in university teaching, commercial training and consulting in accounting and auditing both locally and overseas. She is currently a part time senior lecturer in accounting at the University of Notre Dame, and heads up professional development at BDO WA.

MATT TILLING Senior Manager – BDO
Matt’s professional life has focused on mixing technical and academic work in financial accounting. He currently splits his time between being Senior Manager for Insite Professional Development at BDO and head of accounting at the University of Notre Dame. Both roles require him to combine rigorous accounting knowledge with engaging training. He also regularly publishes in accounting texts and journals.
